Agencies Gather to Coordinate Crisis Information

Pueblo, CO – The Pueblo Community Joint Information Center (JIC) is now open as part of the response to today's incident at the Pueblo Chemical Depot.

The JIC is staffed with public information officers and other personnel from agencies involved in the response and in providing victim care to community residents and visitors impacted by the incident.

The JIC team will work to ensure the public and media receive information that is accurate, timely and coordinated between all responding agencies. Information products will include joint news releases, social media posts, a common website with all incident information, and a phone bank of volunteers who have the most current situational information.

For accurate and timely information, media and the public should call 719-583-4640.
